REPUBLICANS

A Cheering Multitude Present at Big Convention.

Special to the REPUBLICAN:

CHICAGO, JUNE 16.—Nearly twenty thousand people were present when Chairman New called the convention to order today. Mighty cheers went up when the Indiana delegation entered carrying a Fairbanks banner. A flashlight picture of the convention was taken prior to the call to order.

Exactly at 12 o'clock the band struck up "America". At 12:30 Chairman New called the convention to order. In a brief talk he recalled some of the great achievements of the republican party and when he mentioned the name of Roosevelt the greatest cheer yet arose.

At the request of the chairman the convention stood and Bishop Muldoon offered a short prayer, concluding with the Lord's prayer.

Secretary Dover read the call of the convention and while he was reading Hitchcock, the Taft manager, stood in the aisle calm and confident.

Chairman New introduced the temporary chairman, Senator Burrows. He was frequently applauded but the real cheering began at his first mention of Roosevelt and lasted fully five minutes.

Address By Judge Lewis.

Rolla lodge, No. 17, Knights of Pythias, and the Pythian Sisters held annual memorial services in castle hall and decorated the graves of their dead Sunday afternoon. The memorial services were well attended and the program which had been previously prepared for the occasion was an interesting one. The opening exercises were conducted by C. B. Cooper and the music for the occasion was furnished by a quartet. The memorial address was delivered by Judge John M. Lewis, of Seymour, and it is said to have been a most able effort. A solo was rendered by Miss Fannie Manauagh. The graves of the deceased Knights and Pythian Sisters were decorated by committees. —Columbus Republican.

Ordinance Signed.

Mayor Kyte has signed the Holton lighting ordinances which were adopted by the council last week. A committee from the Merchants Association met him Monday afternoon by agreement to talk the matter over with him. The merchants are agreed that the city can get a more favorable contract and endeavored to convince the mayor to their way of thinking sufficiently to get him to withhold his signature for a while longer. But the mayor had apparently made up his mind and signed the ordinances. What the merchants have been working for is the best possible contract for the people and it was with that in view that they have twice asked that action be delayed.

Opens New Business.

Andrew Foster, who has had twenty years of experience as a hotel porter in this city and is known by almost every man, woman and child in Seymour, has started into business for himself and has opened a Commercial Sample Room with shining parlor attached. Mr. Foster opened up for business Monday afternoon and has already been patronized by some of the traveling men. He is prepared also to convey trunks and baggage. His room is located the first door east of the traction station on E. Second street.

Dr. C. A. Hunter and family, of Reddington, made a business and pleasure trip here today.

That Brewery Poster.

EDITOR REPUBLICAN:—

We have just observed the brewery poster that is a libel on Kansas City, Kansas. This poster has been placed in some windows of local saloons and is entitled "Bankruptcy Follows Prohibition." Those who know the facts know that this poster does not tell the truth. Only recently a resident of Topeka, Kansas, a man of undoubted integrity, a former resident of Kansas City, Kansas, and the owner of six pieces of property there now, stood before a large audience in this city and said that this brewery poster was a libel on Kansas City. He said that he was there recently and that not a building of any consequence was vacant. That the buildings formerly occupied by saloons were now occupied by men who were conducting legitimate lines of business under the laws of that state and were prospering. Official records show that the building operations had increased 209 per cent. and that three times as many laboring men had purchased homes last year than ever before in one year. The criminal court expense in Kansas City, Kansas, is $25,000 a year less than before the saloons were closed. As is well known the Kansas constitution prohibits the sale of intoxicating liquors for all except medical, mechanical and scientific purposes, and all sales made must be upon affidavit that it is for the purposes above mentioned.

There is no such thing as a saloon license issued or license fee collected by the state or county authorities. There is not a city or town in Kansas that has received a license fee from the saloons since the prohibitory law went into effect. Every saloon operated in Kansas City was operated contrary to law.

Every one who has investigated knows that these posters do not tell the truth and if the brewers think they can fool the people of Seymour and of Indiana by hanging discredited and distorted posters in saloon windows they are underestimating the intelligence of these same people.

COMMITTEE.

$35 Found.

John Dollens, an employee of the B. & O. S-W. lost a timebook containing $35 on the streets here Monday afternoon. An hour later he dropped into the REPUBLICAN office to advertise for the same. The money had already been found and an "ad" was then in type announcing the fact. The pocketbook was found by a boy in front of Able's dry goods store and was restored to the owner in a few minutes. An "ad" in the REPUBLICAN will usually find an article before the ink is dry and this time the ink had not even been used yet. Small articles, hardly worth advertising, perhaps only worth twenty-five or fifty cents, are frequently left here for a day or two to see if the owner calls for them. Occasionally an article is found and brought here that would be worth a dollar or more to the owner, and an "ad" finds no owner because the owner is not a reader of the REPUBLICAN want columns. These cases are rare for, as everyone knows, most people read the want ads. in the REPUBLICAN every day.

Coming Nuptials.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Nayrocker and son Carl, who reside 2½ miles north-east of this city, went to Indianapolis this afternoon on the limited car to attend the marriage of their son, William Nayrocker, to Miss Mayme Hammant. The bride resides in Hughville, a suburb of Indianapolis, where the marriage will occur at St. Anthony's Catholic church Wednesday morning at nine o'clock. Mr. Nayrocker has been located at Indianapolis for three or four years and has been employed for some time as an electrician. Mr. and Mrs. Nayrocker will remain in Indianapolis to visit a few days. Other friends of the family also went up from here this afternoon to attend the marriage ceremony.

Broken Limb Set.

Fireman Robert H. Peek, of this city, who was seriously injured in the wreck at Milan a few weeks ago, seems to be getting along quite well now at the hospital at Cincinnati. The limb was set a few days ago and Mr. Peek is allowed to sit up occasionally for a few minutes at a time. Mrs. Peek is very much encouraged over his condition and expects to go to Cincinnati again tomorrow to see him.

DR. HURTY

Lectures At Society Hall Tonight at 8 O'clock.

The people of Seymour should take advantage of the opportunity to hear Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the State Board of Health, at Society Hall tonight at 8 o'clock. Dr. Hurty is authority throughout the country on questions concerning the public health.

Tonight he will talk on the subject of sanitation in general and school sanitation in particular. He may have something to say about local conditions as he observes them. His theme is one of vital interest to all of us and he should have a good hearing. He comes under the auspices of the County Medical Society and doubtless all of the physicians will be out to hear him.

Dr. Hurty's lecture will be especially interesting to ladies and they are urged to attend. The lecture is free to all.

Hospital Surgeon in Mexico.

When Mr. S. V. Harding was in the city of Mexico last winter he ran across Dr. Parley Monroe, the youngest son of the late Rev. W. Y. Monroe who will be remembered by many of the older people in this vicinity, especially Baptists, as he was well known all over this section of the state. He found that Dr. Monroe was the chief surgeon at the American hospital in the old city of Mexico and a man of high standing and wide influence. He has been there for the last few years and has won a high place as a physician and surgeon. Mr. Harding says that Dr. Monroe takes pleasure in giving information to the traveler from the United States at every opportunity offered.

Trip Through The West.

Eugene G. Weathers came down Monday from Indianapolis on business and to meet old friends, returning home this morning. He and Mrs. Weathers have just returned from nine weeks through the west and northwest. They went out through Canada and British Columbia, stopping at the most interesting places. They visited Seattle, Portland, San Francisco, Los Angeles and other places on the Pacific coast and were at San Francisco when the big fleet arrived. On their return they spent some time in New Mexico. Mr. Weathers reports a very delightful and interesting trip.

Doctors' School.

The regular weekly meeting of the physicians post graduating school was held last evening in the room above the Cox Pharmacy. The subject for discussion was "Anemia." Those present were Drs. Gerrish, Graessle, Hill, Luckey, Osterman, Ritter and Shields of Seymour Harper of Reddington and Gillispie, of Crothersville. All the members of the school who can leave their work will attend the State Medical Society at French Lick on Thursday and Friday of this week.

Mayor's Court.

In the case of the state against George Tegeler, bartender for Henry Steinkamp at the Jonas Hotel bar, alleging the sale of intoxicating liquor to a minor, the mayor gave his decision Monday afternoon. After reading the number of pages set out by the attorneys in the case the mayor announced that he would have to cut the prosecuting attorney out of his fee of five dollars.

A Wonder That has Puzzled Many.

There are many people that are greatly puzzled over the wonderful effects of Root Juice. When this new medicine was first introduced it was generally thought that a new fake was born to die in a short time. But as time passed and so many testimonials are pouring in from all over the country from people who had given up hope of ever seeing another well day, and neighbor is telling neighbor of some great good received from the use of Root Juice. Many people are wondering why this great remedy was not discovered years ago. What a great boon of human kind is a remedy like Root Juice, a combination of nature's drugs that soothes and heals and tones the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels. How sweet is health and how wonderful are the many cures that Root Juice has made of rheumatism, catarrh, indigestion, female weakness and other troubles of the digestive and secretory organs. Those who wish to learn of this great remedy should go to W. F. Peter drug store.

With Robinson Circus.

Mr. M. Fagen, who is now with the Robinson Circus, was in this city Sunday and met his old friend, Pat Rooney. This was the first time that Mr. Fagen and Mr. Rooney had met for seven years and it was about like seeing two clowns meet in a circus. Mr. Fagen is with advertising car No. 3 under the management of William Dale, who is as well known in Washington as Fagen is in Seymour.

REPUBLICAN HOSTS

Great Convention Called to Order Today Noon In Chicago.

Chicago, June 16.—The Republican national convention was called to order at noon today, Harry S. New of Indiana, chairman of the Republican national committee, wielding the gavel amid a scene of party splendor rarely, if ever, equalled. The vast auditorium of the Chicago Coliseum had been decorated as never before for the occasion, and its seating arrangements, systematized to the last square inch, were hardly adequate for the throng which filled the great structure, every man and every woman on the tip-toe of anticipation.

Final preparations for the great quadrennial meeting of the party had been well matured and the opening scenes were enacted without a hitch. The plans of the leaders had been laid probably with greater precision than has ever been known before a national convention has met, and unless the unexpected happens or the spectre of a stampede rises from its grave, the convention of 1908 will establish a record for the methodical execution of well-established plans. Today produced the first flow of convention eloquence when the veteran senatorial orator, Julius Caesar Burrows offered the first opportunity to the assembled hosts to greet the name of Roosevelt, Taft and other favorites with an ear-splitting and bewildering demonstration, breaking all records for volume and duration. At Senator Burrows's side was Asher C. Hinds, the expert parliamentarian of congress, who will stand throughout the convention at the chairman's elbow to weather any storm that may blow. Hinds was with Speaker Reed during the turbulent days of his iron rule, then with Speaker Henderson and is now with Cannon. His genius is for immediately solving the knottiest parliamentary tangle, and should the unexpected stampede show its head at any time, Hinds will be relied upon to throw against it the full force of precedent and established procedure.

After the preliminary gathering to-day there will be a period of suspense, during which the committees will meet and the organization be perfected, so that the actual nomination of the president is not liable to occur before Thursday.

The Formal Opening.

Chairman New's attitude in calling the convention to order was business personified. Captain New never attempts oratory, and his terse, crisp sentences announcing the object of the convention created an excellent impression. Bishop P. J. Muldoon of Chicago was then introduced and in eloquent terms made a plea for divine guidance in all the deliberations of the body thus assembled.

Following the formal presentation of the gavel to the chairman, the call for the convention was read by Elmer Dover of Ohio, secretary of the Republican national committee, and Senator Burrows of Michigan, temporary chairman, was introduced. The venerable senator, his shaggy beard much whiter than when he last attended a national convention, but with no diminution of vigor in person or voice, addressed his great audience on the record of the party during the four years since the last convention, concluding as follows: "The work of this convention will soon be concluded. The platform will voice the dominant thought of the people, and the candidates nominated must stand upon it firm and erect. They must have the patriotism and sagacity of a Lincoln, the tenacity of a Grant, the wisdom and moderation of a McKinley, and the courage of a Roosevelt. With such a platform and such candidates the issue cannot be in doubt. The Republican party confidently submits its record to the approving judgment of the American people and, upon its renewed declaration of faith, invokes continuance of public favor."

The election of the following temporary officers was then announced:

THE WEB OF LIFE.

A pitiful piece of patches and shreds—
But stay your passionate grieving—
Is it late to pick up the broken threads
And change the pattern of weaving?

The warp was dyed in the wool and drawn
To the loom without your willing;
But the shuttle that flies from dawn to dawn
Carries the thread of your filling.

The fabric of life by which you are known
Is not, perhaps, of your choosing;
But the matter which gives it light and tone
Is the color you are using.

Over the dingy ancestral dyes,
Over and under, and over,
The gold of your shuttle tints as it flies
The bloomish it may not cover.

Forward and onward; you may not pause,
In your own work disbelieving,
For still by the force of its unseen laws
The loom goes on with its weaving.

And your inmost thought is caught in the snare
By a law that no man knoweth;
And your purpose, be it false or fair,
Shows in the web as it groweth.

Well for you and well for us all, sweet friend,
When, at last, our shuttles falter,
If the weavers beginning where we end
Find naught in the pattern to alter.
—Youth's Companion.

Mr. Montagu's Marriage

Robert Montagu walked slowly down the quiet country road. He was within a few miles of the great metropolis, but in this peaceful Hertfordshire village he felt a thousand miles from the hub of the universe. And yet he had but lately returned from a very distant country—the western part of Canada—where things had prospered exceedingly with him. He had, in short, come home with his pile—a rich man at last, and had returned to the old country for a well-earned rest, with an idea at the back of his busy mind that it might be very pleasant to settle down at home—if he could find someone to settle down with!

He looked about him with interest as he made his way down the deserted road, which he remembered so well, many, many years ago; and when he came in sight of a square, ugly white house standing on a little eminence, approached by a handsome carriage drive and surrounded with prosperous-looking outbuildings and a big garden, he slackened his pace a little.

So this was where Adela was living. Things had gone well with her and her stockbroker husband evidently. How would they receive him? He glanced down at his clothes, which though neat were by no means new. His heart yearned for a little affection; he had lived so long without it. Adela had a string of children; perhaps some of them might take him to their hearts, though if they resembled Adela, his elder sister—well, she had never cared for him.

The gay strains of the newest waltz floated up to the top story of the Henderson abode and penetrated to the schoolroom, where, in rather a dismal light and beside a very poor fire, Margaret Verney was trying to concentrate her attention on a book which lay on her lap. But it was not easy to read with that seductive music filling the air, and almost unconsciously her foot beat time softly to the delightful rhythm which she loved so well. If only she could have joined the dancers! A smile touched Margaret Verney's pretty lips as she thought of the past—not so very far from her—when she had danced and done all the things girls love, and had not known a care or any anxiety. Well, that was all changed now. She had to fight her way in the world.

Perhaps she was not the only unhappy person in that house, for, from what she had heard one of the girls say about their newly arrived uncle, it was very evident that he was by no means a welcome guest.

"Imagine him coming now of all times," Amy had said, in her high fretful voice, "bringing disgrace on us all, and making Arthur think what queer relations we have! He must be kept in the background as much as possible."

And the sharp words had reached the uncle's ears; Margaret Verney had caught sight of him at that moment, and she knew the bitter speech had stung him. A great pity and sense of comradeship seized her at that moment, and the smile with which she had looked at him was perhaps the only welcome he had received.

The fire blazed up with a pleasant burst of flames, and Margaret Verney—lost in her own dreams, gazing into the heart of the fire—did not hear the door open quietly, and she started violently when a hand touched her softly and a voice said, with a familiar accent:

"Moping all alone, Miss Verney? That's too bad. You ought to be dancing with the rest."

The girl got up with a little shudder of dislike as her eyes fell on the tall, good-looking young man who had stolen in upon her. She cordially disliked her employer's nephew, who had chosen on more than one occasion to pester her with his unwelcome and insolent attentions, but young Henderson was quite impervious to snubs. "I have told you before, Mr. Henderson, that I will not be pestered with your insulting attentions. If you do not immediately leave the schoolroom I shall summon assistance."

The man colored darkly, and before Margaret was quite aware of his intention he had seized her in his arms. "You'll keep your distance, you young cur," said a quiet voice, and a strong hand flung him aside with astounding ease, while Margaret Verney drew a long breath of relief.

"He didn't hurt you?" asked Montagu, turning to her.

"No, thank you so much. I—I—"

"And you'd better clear out," said Montagu wheeling round and facing the infuriated young man, "unless you wish to be—horsewhipped. Get out!"

"And leave the field clear for you, eh? Well, I wish Miss Verney joy of the returned prodigal—the beggar man from Canada," muttered Henderson, maliciously; but he went out of the room all the same.

"Does he annoy you often?" asked Montagu sharply. "Because if so I will lodge a complaint with my sister."

"Well, it is not the first time Mr. Henderson has tried to annoy me," she confessed; "but please, Mr. Montagu, don't trouble about it. He will be leaving in a few days, and then—it will be all right."

"And you don't join the rest downstairs?" he asked suddenly, after a short silence.

"Oh, no; I have other things to do."

"And you're happy?"

"Well—as a rule, yes. Of course, one has dreams—"

"Yes. We all have dreams," he said; "some of us realize them—some don't. What are your dreams, Miss Verney?"

"To get back my old home. It is in the market now; we were obliged to sell the place when my father died, leaving me and my sister almost penniless. That is why I am here, and I long so for the wild moorland of my native Yorkshire and the free country life."

"I see. And I can understand. Where was your home exactly? You and I should be friends, Miss Verney, for we are both rather in the same boat. Nobody seems to want me much."

That was the pleasantest evening Margaret Verney had known since her coming into the Henderson household.

"WHAT ARE YOUR DREAMS?"

and a friendship sprang up in that short hour between her and the beggarman uncle—as the children called the newly returned relative—which time would only cement. And to Montagu himself some new and altogether delightful thing had come into his life during that short hour.

He was very busy for some weeks after that, but he managed to see a good deal of Margaret Verney. And all the time his plans were maturing and the property on which Miss Verney's early youth had been spent—the home she loved so well—passed secretly and quietly into the hands of the latest millionaire. And then, when everything was quite ready, he asked Margaret Verney to be his wife.

"You don't know much about me, perhaps," he said ruefully, "but I can promise you a happy life, sheltered and cared for. I love you dearly—I will be good to you always—if you can only care a little, when I care so much. Would you be content to marry a poor man, Margaret?"

"If I loved him I would," she said, very low.

"And you care just a little?" he said eagerly.

"Oh, I care so much," she whispered. The rest was silence.

They were married very quietly a few weeks later. And later in the day the newly married couple set off on their journey to Yorkshire.

"We will visit the vicinity of your old home," Montagu said to his wife, and it was with a strangely fluttering heart that in the warm summer evening the girl found herself alighting at the familiar little station.

A handsome motor with a couple of men in dark livery stood in the station yard, and Margaret, to her amazement, found herself being hurried into it, while her modest luggage was put into a luggage cart, in charge of a smart groom.

"But where are we going?" she asked in amazement, as the car glided swiftly away to where Hallenby Hall reared its gray mass from out of a sheltering plantation facing the limitless sea.

"We are going home," said Montagu, tenderly. "Are you glad my own?"

"But I don't understand," she said, faintly. "I—thought you were a poor man, and—"

"Well, my sister and her family made the same mistake," said Montagu, quietly. "You see, they took it all for granted—and so did you. I had my own reasons for not wishing to undeceive them for the present, and—here we are at home, Margaret." And that was how Margaret Montagu came back to her old home.—London Tit-Bits.

INITIATING A SENATOR.

Page Shows Him How to Get Around the Capitol Quickly.

There are many ways in which the new Senator learns when he gets past the Vice President's desk, and one of the most fruitful and unreserved sources of information is the Senate page, says the Washington Herald.

The Senate page is an institution without a parallel. The dozen or so young Americans who enjoy the honor of running errands for the senators are bright and by no means backward, and they are philanthropically ready at any moment to impart information to the new Senator.

The new member of the Florida delegation, Senator Milton, who was sworn in recently, took a lesson from one of the youthful Mercuries that day, accompanied with an actual demonstration of its effect.

Mr. Milton found his way about lunch time to an elevator, intending to refresh the inner man in the dining room down in the basement. When he reached the shaft a sprightly young American in blue serge Norfolk jacket and a pair of bloomer trousers stood there. The boy immediately started in to get acquainted. Delicately imparting the information that he knew the Senator was a "new one," the page proceeded to show him how to ring for an elevator.

"You see," he said, "three rings means that a Senator wants the lift, and that he don't have to wait long, either. No matter who or how many may be in the car, the elevator man starts for the Senator's floor and takes him up or down, wherever he wants to go. Then he lets the other people off where they want to go. See—this way."

Three rings jingled through the corridor and the elevator was there, with half a dozen passengers.

"We want to go down," said the page, with a familiar flourish of his hand toward his protégé. And in they stepped—Senator and page—and down they went.

IN NELL GWYNNE'S OLD HOME.

Lady Churchill Penning Her Reminiscences at Salisbury Hall.

Mrs. George Cornwallis West, formerly Lady Randolph Churchill, practically lives the life of a recluse at the present time in Salisbury Hall, St. Albans, where she is completing her reminiscences, which began some months ago in the Century Magazine. The splendor of the beautiful house in which this literary work is being carried on must be seen to be appreciated. The last home of Nell Gwynne, the place is crowded with interests and associations of King Charles' favorite. Outwardly the residence is much the same as it was in the olden days. Its walls are closely covered with creper and the lawns and drive and doorways are unpretentious as one approaches from the road, says the New York World.

Within the house everything is in direct contrast to the simple exterior. Hall and stairs are paneled with some remarkable tapestries which Nell Gwynne left. The drawing room, dining room and bed rooms are paneled with brocades which Mrs. West picked up in Italy and Paris. These fabrics are all old and in thorough accord with the low ceilings and old-world air of the house itself.

Mrs. West's own bathroom is the finest of its kind in England. To make it she threw two large bedrooms into one. The floor is covered with rose pink carpet specially woven of double texture and softness. Plain pink satin walls harmonize with the floor covering and mezzotints of great rarity are hung at intervals all round. In the center of the carpet three marble steps descend into a white marble bath, which is kept covered. No faucets, pipes or things of that kind are to be seen, as they are manipulated from the floor below. Around the bath glass shelves are fitted. Beneath them crystal bowls for soaps extend right round three sides. The shelf is covered with crystal bottles with pomades, essences and sweet oils to perfume the bath, and, above all, rows of crystal covered boxes filled with gigantic powder puffs and sweet-smelling powders.

Talk that Sells Well.

They were a group in the St. Francis lobby talking Rawhide prospects, says the San Francisco Chronicle.

"Let's go up to Bonneau's room," suggested one of the gathering. "Too many people down here listening to everything we say."

"And you claim to be a Nevada mining man?" asked Frank Bonneau, in a low voice. "Talk like this means sales man. We stay right here as long as there are interested listeners."

Then, resuming his normal voice, he laughed and continued: "Well, right after he made that lucky strike he flashed a new suit which was a wonder. He had hooped it out to Nevada without a bean. Now look what he's worth. Front of a saloon one day a fool practical joker slipped up behind and lighted his celluloid collar. Jury brought in 'justifiable homicide' and he gave the joker's family a cool $50,000, which was big money for them, but nothing for him, with his rock running $500 to the ton."

Even a cheap young man may cost his parents a lot of money.

Smiles of The Day

A Bad Blunder.

"Fanny has given notice." "Why?" "She says you spoke in a brutal manner to her on the telephone yesterday."

"Yesterday? I thought I was speaking to you."—Meggendorfer Blaetter.

At the Theater.

"Ladies will please remove their hats," announced the usher. The ladies looked glum. "Free derelict in the foyer, ladies," he continued pleasantly.—Washington Herald.

No Satisfying Him.

"Ah!" he sighed, "if you only gave me the least hope I—"

"Gracious!" interrupted the hard-hearted belle. "I've been giving you the least I ever gave to any man!"—Philadelphia Press.

Nice Little Dick.

"We had to have little Dick's pretty golden curls cut off."

"That was too bad."

"Yes, I couldn't stand the bad language he used when I combed the tangles out."

No One Else Would.

Cholly Chumpleigh—"If I could find a woman exactly like myself in every respect I might marry her."

Miss Coldeal—"How good of you! That would be a kindness of which no other man in the world, perhaps, could be capable."

A Reflection on Her Age.

Miss Passee—"Here is my portrait just arrived from Paris. I sat for it when I was sixteen."

Old Criticus—"Ah, how divinely those old masters did paint!"

Miss Passee (indignantly)—Sir!

Not Always Sure.

Korson—"So you run a stationery store in Kansas, eh?"

Hilton—"Well, it's tolerably stationary except during the cyclone season."

Bright Boy.

Teacher—"Give me an example of a paradox."

Boy—"Piers 41 and 42."

Teacher—"How so?"

Boy—"Well, they're a pair of docks, aren't they?"

The Difference.

Helen—"Would you call Miss Passee an old maid?"

Marie—"Well, I might over a telephone if I were real mad; but certainly not to her face."

No Grounds for Suspicion.

Mrs. Jones—"You seem to have implicit confidence in your husband."

Mrs. Smith—"Of course I have. He never turns pale when I tell him he talked in his sleep."

Not on the Free List.

"The trusts," remarked the socialist boarder, "give me a pain."

"I understand," rejoined the cheerful idiot, "that the window-glass trust charges for its panes."

Economical Weather.

Rybolt—"What do you call good weather, anyway?"

Tightwad—"The kind that makes a man's wife prefer her own home to a trip downtown."

One Word More.

"Did you hear about the defacement of Skinner's tombstone?"

"No. What was it?"

"Someone added the word 'friends' to the epitaph."

"What was the epitaph?"

"He did his best!"

Naturally Followed.

Kindergarten Teacher—"What happened when the woman killed the goose that laid the golden egg?"

Bobby Herdso—"The goose was cooked."

Wise Father.

Molly—"When you spoke to father, did you tell him you had $500 in the bank?"

George—"Yes."

Molly—"And what did he say?"

George—"He borrowed it.—Sketchy Bits."

The Brute.

Mrs. Mooney (for the one hundred and eleventh time)—"What would you do, darling, if I should die?"

Mooney—"Oh, bury you, I suppose."

Discouraged.

Fitz William—"It's no good stopping at this house; look at that homely baby!"

Dusty Rhodes—"Hold your base till I tell the mother how pretty it is."

Matter of Reciprocity.

Hyker—"Why did you give up smoking?"

Fyker—"In order to marry a rich widow."

Hyker—"I fail to see the connection."

Fyker—"She refused to give up her weeds unless I would give up mine."

The Guilty Party.

Tomdix—"I suppose you witnessed Green's marriage to the widow as an innocent bystander, eh?"

Hojax—"Hardly that. I introduced Green to the widow last fall."

Natural Deduction.

Deacon White—"Our new pastor must be a vegetarian."

Deacon Brown—"Why do you think so?"

Deacon White—"There doesn't seem to be any meat in his sermons."

The Best of It.

Little Willie—"Say, pa, what is the difference between genius and insanity?"

Pa—"The lunatic, my son, is at least sure of his board and clothes."

Against the Law.

"Why do you deliver your wedding invitations instead of sending them through the mail?"

"Don't you know you can't send lottery tickets by mail?"

Reassured.

European Father (consoling to his daughter Ernestine)—"Do not weep, me child. You will not have to marry the dissolute count. Leave your tears for the poor American heiress who gets him."

Rap for Mrs. De Shine.

"I should think Mrs. de Shine would find it awkward to wear so many rings."

"Oh, no. She doesn't wash her hands very often."

He Did.

"I suppose you feel relieved, now that the last of your six daughters has married?"

"Relieved? More than that. Broke!"

Believed in Them.

Miss Gotham—"Do you believe in long engagements?"

Miss Detroit—"Oh, yes, indeed. How else is one ever to make a collection of all those lovely things which men never present to their wives?"

Resentment.

Barber—"What will you have on your face sir?"

Old Boy—"Court plaster!"

Hard Lines.

Clubby—"You look despondent. What's the matter?"

Bilkins—"My suit was refused last night."

Clubby—"Why don't you go to some other pawnbroker, then?"

Committed.

She—"after breaking the wishbone"—"What did you wish?"

He—"I wished that you would let me kiss you. What did you wish?"

She—"I wished that what you wished should come true."

Not So Particular.

First Leap-Year Girl—"I'd propose if I could find a man I thought I could not live without."

Second Leap-Year Girl—"Huh! I'd be satisfied with a man I thought I could live with."

A Trifling Difference.

"Since your marriage to Miss Scadds have you been living at the old manse?"

"Nope; at the old lady's; the old man is dead."

Took Her Seriously.

"Did you know Charlie Cadd had entered a divorce suit against his wife for non-support?"

"What nonsense."

"Fact; she made a remark before witnesses that she was more of a man than he was and he has taken advantage of it."

Knocking.

Yeast—"Did opportunity ever knock at your door?"

Crimsonbeak—"I really don't know. Any knocking I have heard about my house I always supposed was being done by my wife!—Yonkers Statesman."

Tolerance.

Wiggins—"But don't you believe in the modern athletic girl, Mrs. Homespun?"

Old Mrs. Homespun—"Waal, as the gals hain't got any housework or nothin' to do nowadays, I reckon they've got to exercise some way or other!"

The Right Side.

Mrs. Cloon—"It is indeed true that God tempests the wind to the shorn lamb."

Old Cloon—"Yep! When a man's wife elopes he can get a new one easier than he can hunt up the old one."

A Hot Crowd.

The Rev. Mr. Longnecker (solemnly)—"My young friend, do you realize that every ninth man is a drunkard, every seventh person an opium fiend, every fifth woman a victim of hysteria, and every fourth man a slave of tobacco?"

Young Swift—"No, I wasn't aware of it, but then I haven't been training with the same crowd you do."

BANKERS LIABLE FOR ADVANCE

Have to Pay for Bad Investments They Recommended in Germany.

Consul-General Richard Guenther, of Frankfurt advises that the supreme court of the empire, the last legal resort in Germany, has, in several cases, fixed the responsibility of bankers when advising investments to their clients.

One of the latest decisions of this kind was rendered against a bank which, upon receiving an order from a customer to purchase 30,000 marks of a certain class of mortgage bonds, instead of executing the order, wrote to the customer advising him to buy the mortgage bonds of another company, stating that the latter were equally safe and possessed some advantages over those ordered. The customer thereupon changed the order, according to the bank's advice. When the company issuing the purchased bonds failed he brought suit against the bank for the recovery of the money invested.

The court, in its decision against the bank, held: "The bank has not done

HELPFUL ADVICE

You won't tell your family doctor the whole story about your private illness—you are too modest. You need not be afraid to tell Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., the things you could not explain to the doctor. Your letter will be held in the strictest confidence. From her vast correspondence with sick women during the past thirty years she may have gained the very knowledge that will help your case. Such letters as the following, from grateful women, establish beyond a doubt the power of to conquer all female diseases. Mrs. Norman R. Barndt, of Allentown, Pa., writes:

"Ever since I was sixteen years of age I had suffered from an organic derangement and female weakness; in consequence I had dreadful headaches and was extremely nervous. My physician said I must go through an operation to get well. A friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I took it and wrote you for advice, following your directions carefully, and thanks to you I am today a well woman, and I am telling all my friends of my experience."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, that bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

Within Her Rights.

"Madam, what is your age?" asked the lawyer.

"I decline to answer," responded the witness.

"On what ground?"

"On the ground that it would convict me of lying. I've always answered that question when not under oath."—Washington Herald.

"What's he done now?"

"Why, you know, he's a chronic borrower, and when I told him I'd have to stop loaning him money now that I had a wife, he went for me hammer and tongs for getting married at his expense."—Boston Transcript.

THE AGE OF CHIVALRY.

Really It Is Now Rather than Yesterday.

When we speak of the age of chivalry we are apt to imagine the existence at an earlier period of a finer sense of honor, of loftier ideals, of sublimer courage and of more devoted usefulness than are found in the practical workaday world of to-day. As a matter of fact, "very gentle parit knights," such as Chaucer describes, who rode about with a squire, rescuing distressed damsels and redressing wrongs generally, were very few. The ages was comparatively a harsh and cruel one. Oppression and violence prevailed, and human rights and justice were little regarded. Poverty was more general and the condition of the poor more abject than anything we know, and the richest enjoyed little of the comfort which is to-day well-nigh universal. People were supposed to bear the ills to which they were born, and all the efforts of a dozen knights in mail and plumed helmets did not go far toward alleviating misery in a month as do the ministrations of a single visiting nurse now. We live in an age of chivalry vastly expanded. Where there was one worker for others in the knights' days, there are a hundred now, and chivalry permeates the spirit of all the good causes which enlist so many willing hands.

Between the tenth and fourteenth centuries it was but in the bud; now it is in flower, and later on the full harvest of fruitage will come. There never was a time when there was such universal war against oppression of the weak and helpless, when every form of cruelty was so indignantly frowned upon, when womanhood and childhood were more sturdily championed and protected, when the poor and sick were so tenderly regarded and cared for or when the lower animals were made the object of such solicitude and shelter from harm and suffering. There never was a time when, at peace as we are with the world, there were more constant exhibitions of quiet, modest, courageous and splendid heroism than are constantly occurring in the records of our daily lives. In all sorts of accidents—by fire and flood, by the forces of nature, by travel and by the operation of great industries—there is always some one ready, generally some unknown, unheralded person, to risk his life in order to save others. If that isn't chivalry there never was such a thing. We do not yet by any means possess all the virtues, but courage and unselfish devotion in times of stress are pretty good to bind to.—Washington Post.

Uses of Wood.

Pine is the wood most used on account of its abundance. The timber of the oak, which combines in itself the essential elements of strength and durability, hardness and elasticity in a degree which no other tree can boast, has been used as a material for ship-building since the time of King Alfred. It is also employed in architecture, cabinet making, carving, mill work, coopering and a thousand and one other ways, while the bark is of great value as furnishing tan and yielding a bitter extract in continual demand for medicinal purposes. The timber of the pine is also used in house and ship carpentry. Common turpentine is extracted from it, and much tar, pitch, resin and lampblack. Splinters of the resinous roots serve the Highlanders instead of candles. Fishermen make ropes of the inner bark which the Kamschatdales and Laplanders steep in water and utilize for making a coarse kind of bread. The oil obtained from the shoots of the dwarf pine is a kind of universal medicine among the peasants of Hungary, while the soft-grained silver fir is in much requisition for the sounding boards of musical instruments, and the Germans employ it almost exclusively in their vast toy factories. In the manufacture of lucifer matches, and, above all, paper pulp, thousands and tens of thousands of acres of pine forest are cut down every year, and the timber, constituting the chief material of English and American builders, is more used than all other kinds of wood put together.

Mortified? Of Course He Was.

A young man wearing a brand new suit of clothes met two fashionably gowned young women at 11th and Walnut streets the other day. He carried a new leather suitcase, says the Kansas City Star.

"Going away, Jack?" the girls chorused.

"Yes, going down to the springs for a few days," he replied.

They talked for a few moments and as a car came by the young man bade the young women an effusive good bye, tipped his hat and made a hurried dash for the car, which was moving off. Just as he reached the middle of the street the clasp of the suitcase became unfastened. One side dropped and the contents were spilled on the pavement. There two collars, a shirt and a quart bottle of whisky. The young women heard the crash and turned in time to see the predicament of their acquaintance.

The traffic policeman at that corner assisted in replacing the collars and shirt in the suitcase. The broken whisky bottle was abandoned. The young man hurried down the street without waiting for the next car.

Antwerp and Amsterdam have the best health records of all European cities.

The first Governor of Pennsylvania under the constitution of 1790 was Thomas Mifflin.

Straightest of all the rivers in the world is the Lena, of Northern Siberia. It runs for nearly 800 miles with hardly a curve.

Shamrock brought from Ireland and planted in England always developed into clover, said Dr. W. E. St. Lawrence Fanney at Kingston.

The British Royal Academy at the next banquet will ignore a custom that has been observed for about 140 years. There are to be no speeches.

Spain's King is the only monarch who does not sign his name to documents and edicts. His signature is simply "Yo, el Rey."—I, the King.

There are five capital offenses under British law—murder, high treason, piracy, arson in the port of London and attempts to destroy public arsenals.

Pulpwood exported from Canada to the United States in 1905 amounted to 593,624 cords, valued at $2,600,814; in 1907, 628,744 cords, valued at $2,748,901.

In Denmark only the inter-provincial, the inter-municipal and the international telephones are worked by the State, while the local telephones are worked by private limited companies, to which the State has granted concessions.

About 2,500 different kinds of animals are known on earth—that is, warm-blooded, milk-giving creatures, like our common domestic animals. To avoid confusion with other creatures, one ought to call them mammals, meaning milk-giving animals.

According to statistics just issued, the male inhabitants of St. Petersburg outnumber the female by 124,000. The total population of the capital is now 1,454,704, showing an increase of 230,000, or nearly 19 per cent, as compared with the census of 1900.

Bats were the only family of native mammals found on the thousands of small islands in the Pacific. These islands are so far away from the great continents that no mammals but the flying bats could reach them. The variety of bats known on earth is about four hundred.

A sun motor was one of the objects shown at the recent exhibition in Madrid. It is useful for pumping water, working threshing machines, creating electricity, etc., and, of course, after the machine has been bought, there is no further expense. On a cloudy day, however, it would be impossible for much work to be done.

The distribution of mammals over the earth shows many curious features. North America, Northern Europe and Asia have many families in common. Such animals as wolves, foxes, bears, deer and moose, beavers, squirrels and rabbits, live all around the Northern Hemisphere. The mammals found on isolated islands are of surpassing interest to the naturalists.

A young couple, natives of Ceylon, appeared recently before a magistrate in Ohio and asked to be married. All the forms required by the State were complied with, but before the law officer could perform the ceremony a witness who came with the couple bound the thumbs of the contracting parties together. They explained that in their country the act of fastening a man to a woman by the thumb was a sufficient marriage ceremony.

Although electro-deposition is one of the oldest arts in which electricity is practically employed, some remarkable improvements have been made in it during the last few years. One of the most novel of these is a mechanical device for plating small articles, such as screws or pins, which formerly had to be strung by hand on wires or plated in baskets. These are now dumped into a porous barrel placed into the plating solution and revolved by machinery.

Chicago recently had a general "clean-up" day, and reports say it was a big success. The cleaning of the vacant lots of the city was assigned to the school children, and they went at the job with vigor and enthusiasm. When school adjourned at 3:30 p. m. they were provided by the janitors of the various schools with the necessary tools, and within an hour the fruits of their labors were to be seen in huge piles of waste paper, tin cans, old shoes and miscellaneous refuse.

E. T. Williams, newly-appointed Consul General to Tien-Tsin, who arrived in San Francisco recently, says that the most significant feature in the awakening of China, and what promises to be the most potent factor in raising the empire to the level of great Western nations, is the earnestness with which the government is pursuing its policy of general education. Mr. Williams, who has been in the Orient for twenty-one years, is on his way to assume his consular duties, having been appointed on March 4.

Ink Froze on the Pen.

The winter of 1893-4 in Europe still holds its place as one of the most severe and remarkable on record. So tremendous was the cold that trees split asunder with deafening reports. The strangest sight of all was on the Thames. Here on more than a foot thickness of ice a thoroughgoing town of streets was erected. There were tailors' shops, butchers' shops, tobacconists, printers and, indeed, many other business all being carried on as if they had stood there for years.

Writing anywhere but near a large fire was impossible, as the ink froze in pot and on the pen, whole barrels of liquids were frozen solid, and wine was sold in one pound blocks. New bread on being taken out of the oven would immediately stiffen and become solid. There were hundreds of deaths from the cold, and throughout the frost the poor suffered miserably.—Pearson's Weekly.

SORES AS BIG AS PENNIES.

Whole Head and Neck Covered—Hair All Came Out—Cured in Three Weeks by Cuticura.

"After having the measles my whole head and neck were covered with scaly sores about as large as a penny. They were just as thick as they could be. My hair all came out. I let the trouble run along, taking the doctor's blood remedies and rubbing on salve, but it did not seem to get any better. It stayed that way for about six months; then I got a set of the Cuticura Remedies, and in about a week I noticed a big difference, and in three weeks it was well entirely and I have not had the trouble any more, and as this was seven years ago, I consider myself cured. ## TEN MILLION BOXES A YEAR

The most wonderful record in all history—merit made it. The great sums of money spent in advertising have only served to make CASCARETS known, but the greatest advertisement ever printed could do no more than induce a person to try CASCARETS once—a free sample, or at most, a 10 cent box.

Then comes the test, and if CASCARETS had not proved their merit beyond the highest expectations there would not today, after five years on the market, be a sale of nearly a million boxes a month. This great success has been made by the kind words of our friends. No one who has ever tried CASCARETS fails to be pleased and talk nicely about them.

CASCARETS are not only easiest to buy, to carry, to take, to give, but are also the best medicine for the bowels ever discovered. Files full of voluntary testimonials

TUESDAY, JUNE 16, 1908.

WHEAT harvest is upon the farmers and they will be very busy for the next few weeks caring for this crop.

THE United States is not the one and only industrial country in the world, though it is the greatest. Why has it risen from lowest to highest places in the past thirty years? Because its industries in their growth have been nurtured by wise tariff regulations, skilled and unskilled, the best paid workman on earth, enabling him to live better and buy more of his home agricultural produce.

"Health Coffee" is the cleverest imitation of real coffee ever yet made. Dr. Shoop created it from pure parched grains, malt nuts, etc. Fine in flavor—is made in just one minute. No 20 or 30 minutes tedious boiling. Sample free. For sale by C. E. Abel.

Suppose.

Let us suppose a case. Suppose a man is arrested for violating a law of his state. Suppose he is arraigned in the police court and there the charge against him is read to him and the court. Suppose the court asks him whether he is guilty or not guilty and he replies that he is guilty. He is wide awake when he hears the charge read and in full control of his mental faculties. Suppose after this plea of guilty the court assesses the minimum fine of $20 and costs and court adjourns. Now suppose further that after the defendant goes back to his labors he begins to meditate and counts the cost of his experience. He takes counsel and meditates some more. Suppose then that he begins to doubt the truth of his own plea before the court. Suppose then he goes or sends a representative to the court to tell him that his plea of guilt was all a mistake and that he now repudiated that plea made by himself and begged to have the court set aside the judgment and let him have a new trial. Now suppose further that the court hears, the question of doubt is raised in his mind and he recalls his former action and sets the case down for trial. Now suppose a case like this and then ask yourself some questions and then see if you can think up an actual parallel. You can then draw your own conclusions.

A Square Deal

Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines—for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and their formulas are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests and while potent to cure are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children. Not a drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A much better agent is used both for extracting and preserving the medicinal principles used in them, viz., pure triple-refined glycerine. This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

Glycerine plays an important part in Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery in the cure of indigestion, dyspepsia and weak stomach, attended by sour risings, heart-burn, foul breath, coated tongue, poor appetite, gnawing feeling in stomach, biliousness and kindred derangements of the stomach, liver and bowels.

Besides curing all the above distressing ailments, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a specific for all diseases of the mucous membranes, as catarrh, whether of the nasal passages or of the stomach, bowels or pelvic organs. Even in its ulcerative stages it will yield to this sovereign remedy if its use be persevered in. In Chronic Catarrh of the Nasal passages, it is well, while taking the "Golden Medical Discovery" for the necessary constitutional treatment, to cleanse the passages freely two or three times a day with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy. This thorough course of treatment generally cures the worst cases.

In coughs and hoarseness caused by bronchial, throat and lung affections, except consumption in its advanced stages, the "Golden Medical Discovery" is a most efficient remedy, especially in those obstinate, hang-on coughs caused by irritation and congestion of the bronchial mucous membranes. The "Discovery" is not so good for acute coughs arising from sudden colds, nor must it be expected to cure consumption in its advanced stages—no medicine will do that—but for all the obstinate, chronic coughs, which, if neglected, or badly treated, lead up to consumption, it is the best medicine that can be taken.

KEALING'S STRENUOUS TASK

Job of Handling a Presidential Boom No Light Matter.

Indianapolis, Ind., June 16.—Joseph B. Kealing, United States district attorney for Indiana, who has been much in the limelight at Chicago in the efforts of the "allies" to defeat Secretary Taft, is credited throughout the state as being about the "whole thing" of the Fairbanks boom. He probably has performed more labor for the vice-president than all the rest of the latter's lieutenants and it is not likely that any one worked harder for any of the candidates. Kealing has traveled from one end of the country to the other. He has made so many mysterious trips that his intimate friends and political associates have almost completely lost track of him. Party leaders say that no one else could have done more for the vice-president than Kealing and that the latter certainly is entitled to consideration for his untiring energy and devotion to his cause even though he loses. Kealing never played the national game of politics much until he started out to land Mr. Fairbanks in the presidential chair. When he took up that project, however, he worked at it to the exclusion of all others. He kept his own counsel so long that very few of the members of the Fairbanks organization in Indiana knew what was going on. He managed to get a good, strong delegation in his own state, the only weak spot being in the fourth district where the two delegates were not instructed at the time of the election. The entire delegation, however, was instructed at the state convention, so Kealing may lay claim to being the only manager of a presidential boom to have obtained a solid delegation from his candidate's own state. For the past three years Kealing has seemed to have had but one idea politically in Indiana, and that was to keep the track clear for the vice-president. In doing so he made some enemies among his long-time associates, but he gained his points and the Indiana delegation will cast thirty votes for his candidate.

One of the leaders of the Fairbanks organization said today that the vice president's managers realized several months ago that they were up against a strong proposition with the odds against them. Their agents who were sent through the south reported nearly a year ago that the federal machine was being oiled up to land Taft delegations, but it was decided to continue the fight. He declared that up to that time the vice-president's managers had good reason to believe that he would more than break even with Secretary Taft in the south and west, but they learned very soon that they couldn't cope successfully with the federal office holders. The vice-president's managers then started a movement to combine the field against Secretary Taft. They believed that by taking the initiative in that line they could get the benefit of the strength of the "allies" when the final break came.

Until two months ago they hoped that the combination would be sufficient to nominate the vice-president or at least to bring about a stampede that would result in the nomination of the old ticket. The failure of this plan was a bitter disappointment to them and is said now to be largely responsible for the display of bad temper on the part of some of them.

Because of the dissension aroused by the reports of the methods employed to seat Taft delegates from contested territory many of the Republican leaders in Indiana have gone to Chicago hopeful of the renomination of the vice-president for second place. Under the circumstances it is pointed out by many of the Republican workers that the nomination of the vice-president for second place is especially desirable. It is argued that he would make the ticket strong in Indiana where it is very likely to be weak and that his nomination would have a decided tendency to smooth the present ruffled feelings of many Republicans.

Notwithstanding the statements of "Big Chief" Kealing and others in position of authority that the vice-president will not be a candidate for renomination, and the story that he would not accept under any circumstances, many of the Republican leaders who have gone to Chicago are very hopeful that something will turn up to give him a place on the ticket. It is regarded as very probable that some of them will make a strong appeal to him for permission to start another vice-presidential boom. They still figure that he could not afford to turn down the nomination although one of his most intimate friends has declared that he would go to that extreme. Generally speaking, Republicans throughout the state do not seem to feel that the nomination of Secretary Taft will hurt the party's chances, but it is admitted that the nomination of the vice-president as his running mate would make the ticket stronger in this state. The "allies" in their statements have been pleased to place Indiana in the doubtful column, greatly to the chagrin of those who are to manage the campaign.

Trees Planted by Illustrious Men at University of Virginia.

Perhaps the most celebrated spot of its kind on American soil is that wonderful old French garden which divides the mansion at Monticello from the campus of the University of Virginia, which adjoins it, says the New York Press. It is after the French plan to have massive bastions of brick to make the place as secluded as if it were miles from the active, noisy student life beyond. In these pensive precincts a host of illustrious men have gathered and many have left memories of their sojourn clinging to the spot like the vines and flowers they have planted.

Here Jefferson entertained Lafayette and the warrior planted a root of wistaria which had been brought from France for the purpose. The vine still lives and spreads its exquisite flowers over all the south wall. In later days Bledsoe, philosopher and friend of the confederacy, planted some coral honeysuckle, the flowers of which are the pride of the present possessors. McGuffey, abhorred by the schoolboy because of the scores of readers and other textbooks that he wrote, planted some dwarf cedars, and the renowned mathematician, Charles Scott Venable, planted a few trees in symmetrical lines. Oliver Wendell Holmes buried the roots of an English laburnum bush and it thrives to this day. John Staige Davis and Noah K. Davis, noted teachers in the university, have left their mark in the garden.

Among other famous men whose names are identified with the trees or flowering plants of this old garden are such pedagogues as those who wrote Greenleaf's "Evidence," Adams' "Equity," Vattel's "Laws of Nations" and Schele de Vere's "Beginning of the Romance Languages." Alexander Hamilton visited Monticello in Jefferson's time and planted an acorn, which is now a mighty oak. Mallet, the French chemist, brought a root of ivy from Vincennes when he was the guest of Jefferson. It is growing against the bastion. A truly instructive garden for a university is this ancient spot, with its rare old memories and its priceless exotics, planted by men with immortal names.

POTTERY IS EASILY MADE.

Few Tools Are Necessary and No Unusual Skill Is Required.

When one thinks of the numerous possibilities for adding beautiful decorative pieces of pottery to the home in the way of lamp bowls, candlesticks, dishes for flowers or fruit and all kinds of decorative jardinières, it seems well worth while to learn how to make these at home.

Now that plasta, composite clay or plasterine can be obtained already prepared, requiring only the addition of water, the making of pottery comes within the scope of the most unenlightened worker. These compositions can be obtained in cream color, terra cotta or in olive green, says the Delin-eator. A few simple potters' tools—a board, rolling pin and water—are the only requisites. The material is moistened with water and is kneaded on a board to give it plasticity. It is then rolled with a rolling pin.

In order to make a small bowl take a lump of clay and work the knuckles into it until it assumes the form of a bird's nest. This will save a good deal of shaping when building up the sides. Do not attempt to add too large a piece at first, or it will break off, especially if the sides are high. Work the small bits of clay very carefully into the sides.

When the pottery made from plasta is perfectly dry it is sent to a kiln to fire. If the green, white or terra cotta are not just the colors desired the vessels can be colored with ordinary tube oil colors moistened with turpentine and a wax finish given to them afterward. This is really a very practical and easy method of getting what is known as a mat glaze.

UP-TO-DATE ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

Recent Developments Make Possible Better Illumination at Less Cost.

The latest and most valuable development in the incandescent lamp field is the new tantalum lamp, says the Electric News Bulletin. These lamps are made from still another rare metal known as tungsten. It is also a German discovery which was subsequently purchased by an electric company and developed to its present state of usefulness. This lamp consumes only 1 to 1.5 watts per candle power, a saving of more than two-thirds in current consumed in the ordinary lamps. This wonderful economy is best shown by stating that with tungsten lamps substituted for the common incandescent lamps in a house lighted by electricity, the result would be three times as much light for the same amount of current and the same amount of cost.

The fundamental value of tungsten as a lamp filament lies in its wonderfully high melting point. As a metal, as we understand the word, tungsten is practically unknown. It cannot be made into ingots, bar or wire. In its usual refined form it appears as fine steel blue powder. Because it cannot be drawn into wire the lamp filaments from the metal have to be made in a roundabout way. The powder is mixed with an adhesive paste and squirted through a die in a fine thread. This "thread" is baked in an electric oven at a high temperature until the particles of tungsten are practically welded together. The filament is then looped and anchored in the bulb nearly the same way as in the tantalum lamp.

The fact that experiments and discoveries within the last few months have resulted in new incandescent lamps which produce two and three times as much light for the same cost is very encouraging to those who enjoy electric lights. What the future will bring forth is, of course, merely speculation, but there are those among the world's leading inventors who say that the incandescent lamp is still a long way from the perfection it will attain in the next few years to come.

CHILDLESS SHOULD ADOPT.

Children Keep One from Becoming Selfish and Are a Joy.

The woman who has no children never knows the greater joy of devotion. Her sympathies, instead of extending themselves, will narrow more and more and tend to concentrate themselves upon the merely pleasurable experiences and sensations which only lead souls about in their own labyrinthine domain. She may win personal distinction and high fame. She may surely deserve them, but she will be in danger of following the false way which begins and ends in self, says Julia Ward Howe in the Delin-eator. If the fates deny her marriage or leave it bare of offspring, let her win to her arms some motherless child and study the lesson taught by the dear Christ when He placed a child before His disciples and bade them learn from him the great science of life.

The beauty of childhood is not easily overappreciated—the mobile countenance, the flexible muscles, the fair, smooth forehead, the unconscious grace of movement. What a lovely presence is this! It illuminates your whole house, be it a hovel or a palace. The babe newly born, so fine, so soft, so tender! By degrees it enters into possession of its bodily powers. Soon he follows her about, walks beside her, begins to question her regarding the meaning of all that he sees. He learns to pray at her knee. He goes to school. All the way from infancy to adolescence is strewn with flowers. It has no doubt an offset of anxieties and cares, but would any of us dream of giving up the rose because of its thorns?

Mexico's Vigorous President.

This is not the only country which can lay claim to a strenuous president. Mexico has also stories to relate not unlike some which cluster about Mr. Roosevelt.

President Diaz, when 70 years old was one day chatting with some American tourists in the military college at Chapultepec, says his biographer, when he noticed a climbing-rope hanging near him.

"I wonder if I could climb that now!" he exclaimed, and to the amazement of his guest, threw off his coat and went up the rope hand over hand to the top—a difficult exercise for a cadet.

When he came down, he turned to the Americans, smiling, and said:

"Now you can say you have seen a man of 70 years do that."

Took Kindly to the Water.

They tell this story of the experience of two Maine boys in trying to catch a woodchuck:

They had tried quite a number of times to capture the animal, but unsuccessfully. At last they decided to drown him out; so, procuring four pails, each took two, and they carried water for two solid hours and poured it into the hole in the ground in which the said chuk had taken up his abode. Getting tired, they sat down. After about half an hour the woodchuck cautiously left the hole and deliberately walked down to the brook and took a long drink of water and then scooted, much to the disgust of the two boys.

Too Easy.

The Union bank of St. Petersburg has its own police service. One night the director was sleepless. He wondered whether the bank police were really trustworthy. He concluded to make a trial. He disguised himself and rushed, pistol in hand, into the bank vault. The police were good for nothing. They looked on quietly, while the director pocketed 2,000,000 rubles and carried them away. Since then no one has seen the director.—Simplicissimus.

"Yes, sir, it does. Since I have become rich nobody ever attempts to offer me any good advice."—Washington Herald.

WHEN NEW YORK WAS YOUNG.

City Hall Was the Social as Well as Official Center 200 Years Ago.

Had Capt. Kidd revisited Wall street some three-and-forty years after he had become one of its pioneer proprietors he would have found himself in strange surroundings, and it is not at all probable that he would have realized the dignity or importance of the thoroughfare from an external evidence, says Harper's Magazine. Indeed, the street presented in 1734 a decidedly ragged and unattractive aspect. At its eastern end or slip, in front of the Long Island ferry, stood the flimsily constructed Meal market, whose transactions in corn and similar merchandise had been supplemented by a more profitable traffic in negro slaves, who were daily displayed in its stands for the benefit of those desiring to buy, sell or hire such commodities, and on either side of this unsavory mart stretched a broken line of mean little wooden buildings extending as far west as Williams street.

From this point the prospect gradually improved, the Broadway end boasting some dwellings of neat and attractive appearance, but the north side remained entirely vacant save for four wholly dissimilar structures. The first of these, on the northwest between William and Nassau streets, was the property of Gabriel Thompson, a tavern keeper, beyond which loomed a huge barnlike affair erected by the Bayards in 1729, for what they termed "the mystery of sugar refining"—a mystery which Wall street has not wholly fathomed to the present day; and adjoining this crude factory stood the most pretentious building on Manhattan island—the city hall, whose foundations had been laid in 1699 with the stones taken from the bastions of the old palisade. Beyond this, and almost adjoining it, lay the Presbyterian church, a substantial brick edifice; and at the head of the street on Broadway squatted the ugly, square little wooden building with a disproportionately tall steeple which had sheltered the congregation of Trinity church since 1696.

Such was the condition of the street which had in less than half a century acquired political if not social ascendancy over all other thoroughfares of the city, which now boasted a population of nearly 10,000 souls. The most potent influence effecting this result had, of course, been the selection of the street as the site of the city hall, for that building was not only the seat of government, but the social center. New York in those days being ruled by an aristocracy whose nod made the laws and set the fashions.

Personally Conducted.

The professional guide is about the last person the visitor to the art gallery would care to have with him for a companion. It may be instructive to listen to his talk, but the feelings of a sensitive person must suffer. The author of "With the Tourist Tide" shows the absurdity of employing a guide to the galleries abroad, where all needed information is given, and where the comments of a guide are impertinent. He was visiting the galleries of the Louvre.

The best way is to single out a few pieces, or have them singled out for you, and confine yourself to them. We did this, and were paying our respects to Millet's "Gleaners," when a tourist comet swept into view, bearing down across the great hall in our direction, headed by a professional guide who had probably been picked up at the entrance. We retired from the direct line of its orbit, and watched it go past. The head halted before the picture while the tail telescoped.

The following artistic introduction was made by the master of ceremonies: "This is the 'Gleaners.' (The name stood above the painting in large black letters.) It was painted by Millet. (The artist's name also occurred just under the picture.) He painted another picture, called the 'Angels,' which was sold for a hundred thousand dollars. You might think that he was a rich man, but he died owing his butcher and baker."

With that the comet moved on to make acquaintance with other stars in the galaxy. And perhaps it was as well, after all, for you recall Tennyson's story of the man who insisted on discussing market quotations while he stood beside the Venus of Milo.

YOUNG FOLKS

"Quarters."

The ship is lying at anchor in a distant port; it is night, and nothing is heard but the tramp of the sentry on the fore-castle and the ripple of water at the gangway.

Only the officer of the deck, the quartermaster and the guard are awake. The entire crew are below decks and dreaming in their hammocks.

The cabin door opens and the captain steps forth softly, fully dressed, and wearing his sword and revolver. He seeps in a low tone to the officer of the deck, who sends an orderly forward with a message. In a moment the orderly returns, bringing with him the drummer, who stands silently at the mast, drumsticks in hand, watching the commander.

"Eight bells"—midnight—is struck. At a silent signal from the commanding officer, the drummer poises his sticks an instant, then sounds the long roll, or "alarm," which is at once followed by the quick beat to "general quarters."

Instantly the scene changes to one of, apparently, the utmost confusion. Four hundred men leap from their hammocks; passing a few turns of the lashings around them, they throw them into their "nettings," then spring to their stations at the batteries and cast loose the guns.

A moment more, and a bright flash and roar from the fore-castle pivot gun bursts upon the stillness and gloom of the night, followed quickly by the broadside battery.

Each gun is fired once, a blank charge, but enough to show that the gun is in good order and ready for service.

As suddenly the pandemonium subsides; confusion gives place to silence and order, and a sound is heard; but the battle lanterns flashing along the crowded deck reveal the well-disciplined crew standing at their quarters, every man equipped with cutlass and pistol, silent and alert. Sponges, rammers, supply-boxes and battle-axes litter the deck; everything is provided and ready as for action; while the captain, accompanied by the executive officer (the first lieutenant), with an orderly bearing a lantern, makes a thorough inspection fore and aft and below, including the powder division, magazines and shell rooms, to see that nothing is lacking which would be required in real action.

At the touch of the drum the ship has been changed from death-like stillness to readiness for battle, every officer and man at his station, armed, silent, expectant—and all in less than three minutes!—Chicago Daily News.

A Seesaw Experiment.

Get a full length candle—not one of those called "shorts"—and having heated the points of two large pins, stick them into the candle midway from end to end and on opposite sides, so they may serve as trunnions. Place two glass tumblers or goblets side by side, and close enough to each other for the pins to rest on their edges. This done, take your knife and trim the ends of the candle so that it will balance perfectly, resting with its pin trunnions on the two glasses. In trimming the candle, leave the wick exposed at each end. Now apply a match to each wick, and when the little drops of melted wax begin to fall—on plates put there to receive them—the candle will begin to move up and down, first one end and then the other, in seesaw fashion. To make the experiment more interesting, make little cardboard figures of two boys, with the joints of arms and legs hinged on pins, and attach one to each end of the candle by means of fine wire. Let the pieces of wire be long enough to keep the figures away from the blaze. Having done all this, sit down and laugh at the queer capers of the little figures as they move up and down in their miniature seesaw.

Jim and Mag.

Little Mag and little Jim
Came to school one day;
Teacher asked them questions,
But no word would they say.

They stood with wiggling fingers
And bashful, downcast looks,
One a-holding to the slates
And t'other to the books.

"You're brother and you're sister,
I s'pose," the teacher said;
The boy—he answered nothing,
The girl—she shook her head.

"We ain't brother an' sis-ter,"
The girl spoke very low;
"I'm Mag an' he is Jimmy,
An' we be twins, you know."

The Bat's Sense of Touch.

It is said that the bat has a more delicate sense of touch than almost any other animal. It flies about at night with great swiftness, and although its eyes are nearly sightless, it seldom comes in contact with any object. This is due altogether to its highly developed sense of touch. Strange to say, this is confined to the membrane with which they fly, their so-called wings. So delicate is its nervous structure, that it is acted on by any object, even at a considerable distance, and the bat is thus warned of its presence.

She Was Extra Polite.

The young woman operators at the central stations of the telephone companies are polite, as a rule, not only because it is natural for them to be so, but because the companies require it. The editor heard of one the other day, however, who was so polite and accommodating on the first day of her service that she came near to getting herself into trouble. In response to a call over the phone she would say, "What number please?" And when the caller asked for 754, she answered, "I'm sorry, but 754 is busy just now, but I can give you 753 or 755; which will you have?"

IN THE FISHING SEASON.

Annual Sacrifice of the Humble But Useful Angle Worm.

The fishworms are beginning to move, as they do with beautiful regularity at the earliest approach of spring. They set the pace, and soon after they begin to move so does the fisherman, and then the fish, says the Indianapolis News. Why does the fishworm, alias angleworm, alias earthworm, alias (scientific) oligochaeta, leave its safe winter quarters below the frost line and burrow its way toward the surface, only to be pursued by the ruthless fisherman, or if it protrude its exploring head the smallest fraction of a degree above ground, to be seized by the predacious robin and violently dragged from its native element? Why, we ask again, does the fishworm, alias, etc. incur these deadly risks by leaving its winter quarters as soon as the earth begins to soften, and the earliest spring rain, still cold, invites exploration of the surface soil? It can only be because instinct, some imperative law of nature, tells it the time has come for it to get busy and resume its work of trying to make the world habitable by triturating and pulverizing the soil and thereby making it more tillable and productive.

There are no earthworms in the arctic or antarctic region, nor in frozen high mountain altitudes, nor in sandy deserts. They are too wise to waste their lives in localities where they can do no good. It is their mission to assist in cultivating soils that can be productive and the fact that many of them fall a prey to fishermen and robins does not deter them from their appointed work—a work, by the way, of which they have a monopoly as to methods and in which the beneficial results are out of all proportion to the simple means employed. For by simply passing the soil through their bodies they contribute enormously to its tillable quality and productiveness.

Darwin estimated that earthworms bring to the surface in rich meadow lands not less than one-fifth inch of soil per annum. They are not noted for brilliancy, but they are very industrious, and that is a quality which counts in the long run. Fishworms are entitled to respect and they have their rights, but if you will use them for bait use a small hook and instead of crowding the worm on the hook pass the latter through one end of the middle of the worm, leaving it free to wriggle. The bait is thus rendered much more attractive than it would otherwise be and the fish care little for the visible hook.

Measuring a Spirit.

A man of St. Joseph, Mo., relates a story in connection with a spiritualistic meeting once held in that town. A man named Daniel Miller, who was some six feet seven inches in height, had died recently.

The spirit of Daniel was called for by some one at the seance mentioned. When it had appeared and announced its readiness to reply to any question, some one asked:

"Are you in heaven?"

"Yes," came from the shade of Daniel.

"Are you an angel, Dan?"

"Yes."

At this juncture the questioner paused, having apparently exhausted his fund of questions. But, to the amusement of all, he suddenly added, "And what do you measure from tip to tip, Dan?"—St. Louis Republic.

Fish or Animal.

All organized living beings are animals, members of the animal (breathing) kingdom. The order cetacea, to which the whale belongs, is higher up in the animal scale than the fish proper, its members being mammals, breathing through their lungs, and bringing forth living young, which for a time they suckle. The immediate ancestors of the whale evidently spent part of their time on the land, having limbs where now are found the whale's paddles.—New York American.

To Brighten a Gas Mantle.

When your gas burns poorly, probably the mantle is black. If so, remove the globe, get a salt shaker, and with it sprinkle salt on the mantle, as much as will cover it, then light the gas and let it burn till all the black is off. Then replace the globe. Cleaned thus, the mantle should be as good as new again.

Perishable Property.

A "Merchant Carnival" was in progress, and all the maidens of the village were representing the various shops. Pretty Sarah Moffatt, in a lace gown strung with garlands of bonbons, advertised the principal candy-store.

At the beginning of the festival Sarah fairly glistened with attractive confectionery, but as time wore on the girl's decorations dwindled. By the final act, not a bonbon glistened among Sarah's ruffles.

"Where in the world," asked the stage-manager, noticing the plainness of Sarah's attire, "are all your decorations? Have you lost them?"

"No," returned Sarah, "they're perfectly safe. I'm wearing them inside."

The Money Hungry.

James R. Keene, the famous New York financier, said at a dinner of the recent panic: "The way men hungered after money reminded me of Tom Fergus, a friend of my 'Frisco days. Tom, one morning, expected a man to call and pay a bill. While he was waiting for the man, a summons came for him to go out. Before going, he put this notice on his door:

"Have gone for half an hour. Will be back soon. Been gone 20 minutes already."

THE FIRST TASTE.

Learned to Drink Coffee When a Baby.

If parents realized the fact that coffee contains a drug—caffeine—which is especially harmful to children, they would doubtless hesitate before giving the babies coffee to drink.

"When I was a child in my mother's arms and first began to nibble things at the table, mother used to give me sips of coffee. As my parents used coffee exclusively at meals I never knew there was anything to drink but coffee and water.

"And so I contracted the coffee habit early. I remember when quite young, the continual use of coffee so affected my parents that they tried roasting wheat and barley, then ground it in the coffee-mill, as a substitute for coffee. "But it did not taste right and then went back to coffee again. That was long before Postum was ever heard of; I continued to use coffee until I was 27, and when I got into office work, I began to have nervous spells. Especially after breakfast I was so nervous I could scarcely attend to my correspondence.

"At night, after having coffee for supper, I could hardly sleep, and on rising in the morning would feel weak and nervous.

"A friend persuaded me to try Postum. My wife and I did not like it at first, but later when boiled good and strong it was fine. Now we would not give up Postum for the best coffee we ever tasted.

"I can now get good sleep, am free from nervousness and headaches. I recommend Postum to all coffee drinkers."

"There's a Reason."

The death has occurred at Somersham, England, of Mrs. Holdich, in her 101st year. She was born in that village on January 11, 1808, and up to the age of eighteen was so delicate that her parents feared she would never grow to womanhood.

A vicarious snake-bite is the curious case reported from Shepperton, Victoria, by Dr. Welchman. A small dog was bitten by a snake, and in turn bit his master, who was dressing his wound. The dog died. The man soon afterward became drowsy and on being taken to a hospital developed alarming symptoms of snake poisoning, and only energetic treatment saved his life.

Professor Blau, of Germany, has discovered a new process of developing illuminating gas that may be bought by the bottle at the rate of 15 cents a pound. A twenty-two-pound cylinder at 15 cents a pound would give a fifty-candle power light for four months, used four hours a day. That is to say, the cost would be 11-7 cents an hour, or, say, $1.25 a month, or even less.—Brooklyn Eagle.

John Hassall, the English artist, is unconventional in his methods and says that he shudders to think what would happen if some of his friends knew how he got certain effects. If he thinks burning will help him get the right shade of brown he drops his brush and uses the red-hot poker. Once, when he found difficulty in getting the dirty gray he wanted, he used a little damp earth from the garden with very satisfactory results.

An Americanized Chinaman, Chin Gee Hee, is the projector, president and engineer-in-chief of a railroad which has recently been opened in the Hong-kong hinterland. Of the six locomotives used four were purchased in the United States, the others coming from Germany. The president says his chief difficulty in building the road was in overcoming the obstinacy of the natives, who opposed the work on the ground that the smoke from the locomotives would ruin their crops.

"Mason and Dixon's line" is a reference to the boundary which was established, in the years intervening from 1763 to 1767, between the colonies of Maryland and Virginia on the one side, and that of Pennsylvania on the other side, by Charles Mason and Jeremiah Dixon, who were two English civil engineers. So thoroughly was the allotted task performed by these young Englishmen that in 1849 revision of the survey failed to detect the slightest error. The United States government also, as recently as 1901, has caused the Maryland portion of the noted boundary line to be again revised.

Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Connecticut, Illinois, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Ohio, Tennessee and Wisconsin were named from the principal rivers; Carolina, from Charles IX. of France; Georgia, from George II.; Louisiana, from Louis XIV. of France; Maryland, from Henrietta Maria, Queen of Charles I.; New York, from the Duke of York, afterward James II.; Virginia, from Queen Elizabeth, the virgin Queen; Pennsylvania, from William Penn, and Delaware from Lord Delaware; Dakota, Massachusetts and Texas took their names from Indian tribes, and Idaho, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Michigan, Nebraska, Oklahoma, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming were derived from Indian words.

Queen Victoria of Spain recently held at Madrid a curious court ceremony. This is called "cushion taking." The ceremony used to be held by the Queen alone, but King Alfonso has taken lately to making his appearance at the gathering. As the women enter the presence chamber each is presented with a highly ornamented cushion. All then stand in a row, while, in turn, every lady advances to the throne on which Her Majesty is sitting, and, placing the cushion at the Queen's feet, proceeds to sit upon it. The Queen enters into a brief conversation with each debutante in Spanish, after which the lady retires, carrying her cushion with her. This is a trying ceremony for the debutantes because, save the one who is in conversation with the Queen, all the others have to remain standing.

CURES FOR INSOMNIA.

Mr. Philgimthow suggests one That Might Do in Some Cases. "In my own case," said Mr. Philgimthow to a New York Sun man, "I find that insomnia proceeds largely from worry over money. My nerves are all right and I have a cast-iron stomach. I can eat anything and enjoy it, and as a general proposition life looks pretty rosy to me; but still

I do occasionally have nights when I can't sleep, when I lie awake worrying over how I am going to make both ends meet.

"I never deliberately consider financial questions at night, but I do find that some times—and this may be after a most completely comfortable evening—financial questions obtrude themselves upon me after I have gone to bed.

"To stave off these unpleasant questions and enable myself to forget them so that I could go to sleep I have tried various familiar methods; I have got out of bed and stood up to make myself tired; I have recalled and dwelt on pleasant journeys; I have counted from one up to a million, more or less; I have said the alphabet backward over and over again; I have tried many things; but do you know what in my case I find most efficacious? It is a story that I tell to myself how I am going to become comfortably rich and thus free from all financial problems.

"It took me a considerable time to build up this story in such shape that it just suited me, so that it seemed natural, like something that might have happened, you understand, and then I filled in the amount that was coming to me, making that enough so that the income from it would be sufficient to provide for all ordinary wants and as well for a few modest luxuries, including a little travel—a pleasant prospect to dwell upon. And by the time I had this story completely built up it took me some time to tell it to myself, with that snug little fortune that was to save me from all financial worry coming in at the end.

"And then when those money questions used to pounce on me after I'd gone to bed and threaten to keep me awake I'd start off and tell myself that story, as in truth I have done many times. And sometimes I'd have to tell it to myself two or three times over in succession to drive away the specter, and then again once would do, that money coming in at the end of it soothing me to sleep, and then I have sometimes not even been compelled to tell it all through once; I have fallen asleep before I had finished it, before I got the money, so sure was I that it was coming to me."

HE NAMED THE MINE.

No colonial statesman was more praised or more abused than was Richard Seddon during his long term of office as Premier of New Zealand. He had few personal antagonists. Politics aside, declares his biographer, there were few who did not like him. Instances of his tender-heartedness, his overflowing good nature, even to those with whom he had had "differences," occur to everyone who knew him.

Among the many stories of his determination is one of the time before he entered Parliament. He had become well known, however, and was asked to name a new mine opened near Kumara.

On the day set aside for the ceremony Mr. Seddon was away from home, and at the time fixed for the departure of the townspeople for the new mine he had not returned. The party waited for some time, but as Mr. Seddon did not return, it was decided that another gentleman should perform the ceremony.

They started on the twelve-mile trail to the mine, with packhorses to carry the hampers, but had not been gone more than half an hour when Mr. Seddon reached Kumara, and was informed of the departure of the caravan.

"Who is going to name the mine?" he asked.

"Mr. Blank," he was told.

This was too much for Mr. Seddon, because the gentleman named was a formidable opponent of his in local affairs. Without waiting a minute he hurried home, snatched up a hatchet, and set out for the mine in a direct line through the heavy brush.

He had six miles to go, only half the distance by track, and those who know the New Zealand bush will understand the difficulties of that journey.

"Did he get there first?" asked one who listened to the story.

"He gets everywhere first," replied the story teller. "He was waiting for them when they arrived, with his clothes all in rags and his body scratched all over, but it was he who named the mine."

HE WASN'T.

Mr. Jones' costume at a masquerade ball was that of a Roman warrior, with metal helmet, breastplate, greaves, etc., which, as the evening wore on, occasioned him great discomfort. When the time came for unmasking Jones raised his vizor, and a friend inquired whom he was supposed to represent.

"Are you Appius Claudius?" asked he. "No," replied Jones, wiping his streaming brow. "I'm not. I'm unhappy as the devil!"—Lippincott's.

Protect Your Hands.

It takes less than a minute to put on an old pair of gloves when one has a dirty piece of work, such as dusting, to do; but what a saving it is to the hands! Housewives who make a point of thus protecting their skin never have unsightly ingrained blacks on their hands, nor those distressing cracks that get so dreadfully chapped and painful.

WOMAN OUTDOES POSTOFFICE.

Traces Owner of Clothes Returned to Dead-Letter Office.

"The fates call and mortals obey." The speaker was a small, precise and elegant old lady whose diminutive stature was quite forgotten by her hearers in the realization of her force and dignity, says the Washington Star. She had gone to the dead-letter sale under protest and was narrating an experience which grew out of the purchase she had made. "I went to that sale not because I wanted to or was interested or expected to buy anything, but because I've an impertinent grandniece who hinted I was too old to be in such a crowd.

"After a while the auctioneer offered a package as big as a sack of flour, and I bought it for 85 cents. Then when I brought it home I found it contained nothing but a lot of worn, threadbare clothing mended almost to death. I was just about to force it on that grandniece of mine and make her distribute it to some poor families when I found a letter in the pocket of a coat. I've kept that letter. The writer was a young girl from down east in Massachusetts. She was sending that clothing as the only Christmas gift she could make for her brother Ben, who lived in a city in Wisconsin.

"Well, when I read that letter I just sat down and cried to think that that poor girl's sewing had all gone astray. I made up my mind that if the postal authorities could not find the girl's brother I would. So I did up the bundle again, put a letter outside asking the postman to return the package to me if he couldn't deliver it and then addressed the whole thing to 'Mary Burgess' Brother Ben, —, Wis.' Would you believe it? That postman in that Wisconsin town really found that poor boy and gave him the bundle. And now I've a letter from the girl in which she tells me both she and her brother are in much improved circumstances, that Ben has a fine position in a furniture factory and that they are soon to be together for good."

Harry was visiting in the country and, seeing some feathers scattered in the poultry yard, he said: "Grandma, can't you do something to keep your hens from unravelling?"

Freddy—Papa, has everybody got a soul? Papa—I suppose so, Freddy. Freddy—Well, I'm going to open my mouth real wide, papa, and I want you to look in and see if I've got one.

"Which shall I get, the jelly or the cake?" asked the small boy who was making a raid on the pantry. "Take cake, of course," replied his little sister. "Mice don't eat jelly and we couldn't blame it on 'em."

Shortly after the new baby had arrived the family doctor visited the nursery to break the news to 5-year-old Marjorie. "Wouldn't you like a little brother, Marjorie?" he asked. "No, indeed," replied the small miss. "I detest men."

"Mamma," said small Susan, before she began her evening prayer, "may I pray for rain to-morrow?" "If you want to, dear," replied her mother. "But why do you want it to rain?" "Annie Uppson is going to have a lawn party and I wasn't invited," explained Susan.

Likes to Sue Railroads.

A unique lawyer is Jesse Gandy of this place, says a Broken Bow (Neb.) dispatch to the New York Herald.

Gandy takes only one class of litigation—a claim against a railroad, preferably the Burlington road. Twenty years ago the Burlington made Gandy angry. At that time Gandy was a wealthy farmer and rancher. He knew nothing of law, but he had been wronged. He took the case to several lawyers, but found each one of them was retained by the railroad and none would take his case.

"I'll study law and fight my own case," said Gandy, and he started with Blackstone immediately. In time Gandy was admitted to the bar. His first announcement says: "I will take all righteous cases against a railroad and I will guarantee to win. If I lose your case I will pay the costs."

For sixteen years Gandy has been busy fighting the railroads—especially the Burlington. He will not take a case unless he is convinced the plaintiff has a good chance of winning and he pays all the costs, just as his advertisement says. Usually he refuses to accept any fee for his services. He is independently wealthy and simply fights because he loves it and to "get even."

How It Happened.

After he had named some of the animals Adam came to the lady.

"And now, what would you like to be named?" he inquired. She replied demurely: "Oh, sir, please call this eve."

And so the stupid fellow call it Eve. —Toledo Blade.

One by One.

One by one the sands are flowing,
One by one the moments fall;
Some are coming, some are going;
Do not strive to grasp them all.

One by one thy duties wait thee,
Let thy whole strength go to each,
Let no future dreams elate thee,
Learn thou first what these can teach.

One by one (bright gifts from heaven)
Joys are sent thee here below;
Take them readily when given,
Ready, too, to let them go.

One by one thy griefs shall meet thee,
Do not fear an armed band;
One will fade as others greet thee;
Shadows passing through the land.

Do not look at life's long sorrow;
See how small each moment's pain,
God will help thee for to-morrow,
So each day begin again.

Every hour that fleets so slowly
Has its task to do or bear;
Luminous the crown, and holy,
When each gem is set with care.

Do not linger with regretting
Or for passing hours despond;
Nor, the daily toil forgetting,
Look too eagerly beyond.

Hours are golden links, God's tokens,
Reaching Heaven; but one by one
Take them, lest the chain be broken
Ere the pilgrimage be done.
—Adelaide Proctor.

A Satisfying Thought.

Men are usually reticent about those things which affect them deeply; their religious beliefs and their family affections. Now and then they will talk of them with their most intimate friends, and it happens once in a while while that a man is so full of a sacred experience that the need to speak of it overcomes his reluctance to expose his inner life, and he confides in the first acquaintance whom he meets.

Major Harrison had passed through such an experience one cold March day, and as he returned to his usual work in the court-house, he stopped in the room assigned to the newspaper reporters. Only one man was in the room at the time, and the major drew a chair near him and sat down, hardly noticing the nod of recognition. When the reporter finished what he was writing and looked at his caller, the major began to talk almost as if he were thinking aloud.

"This has been a sad and a pleasant day for me," he said. "I was married thirty years ago to-night, and my wife died last December. I have just been out to Greenwood to lay some flowers on her grave. While I was there I got to thinking about old times."

His voice trembled a little, but he continued:

"Our married life was happy. We were together on every anniversary of the wedding but three, and then I was in the army."

"I can remember the day when I was married just as distinctly as if it were yesterday. I was working on the Herald then, and had made arrangements to stop earlier than usual in the afternoon. The morning passed slowly, and I became so impatient that I couldn't work. I stopped at half past two o'clock, and went home and dressed for the wedding. Then I went to my wife's house—or rather the house of the girl who was to be my wife—and I reached there at six o'clock, although the wedding was not to begin till eight o'clock."

"At last the bride was dressed and started to come down-stairs with her bridesmaids. I can see her now. She wore a silk dress of some color between white and lavender, and had on a veil, and some flowers at her belt, and her bright blue eyes were sparkling. She grew stouter, for she was the mother of a large family."

"I ran up the stairs, and met her on the landing. She asked me how she looked, and I said what any bridegroom would say under the circumstances, and she seemed pleased. Yes, we lived happily together for a good many years."

"I can understand how this has been a sad anniversary for you," remarked his companion. "But you said it has been pleasant also. How was that?" "No, it has not been altogether sad," the major explained, with a smile. "While I was standing by the headstone to-day I thought of all the years my wife and I had together—the joys we shared; the happiness of seeing our children grow up into manhood and womanhood. And then I thought how cold the grave was, with the winds blowing over it from the bay, and if I believed that that is the end of it all, it would be intolerable. But I did not think of my wife as there in the frozen ground. I did think, instead, how pleasant, how satisfying, it is to believe that there is a something beyond the tomb."

The two men were silent for a time. When they did speak again it was of commonplace things.—Youth's Companion.

Abide in Peace.

The crosses which we make for ourselves by a restless anxiety as to the future are not the crosses that come from God. We show want of faith in Him by our false wisdom, wishing to forestall His arrangements, and struggling to supplement His providence by our own providence. The future is not yet ours; perhaps it never will be. If it comes it may come wholly different from what we have foreseen. Let us shut our eyes, then, to that which God hides from us, and keep in reserve in the treasures of His deep counsels. Let us worship without seeing; let us be silent; let us abide in peace.—Fenelon.

Yielding the Will.

God limits His power by our wills. He does not do all that He might do except as we will to let Him. The more our wills conform to God's, the greater become the possibilities of God's power in and through us. Therefore it is that the psalmist, looking forward to the day of triumph for God and His people can say, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of Thy power." When we are all yielding our wills wholly to God's control, His power will be revealed in its full richness and blessedness. And no child of God needs to wait for others in thus experiencing the day of God's power.

The Kingdom of God.

Think not to find this Kingdom great,
Upon some distant star,
Or in the pomp of royal state,
Or favored lands afar;

Where sunny skies bend low to kiss
The foliage's brilliant green,
And souls of men are soothed by bliss
In other climes unseen;

Invisible to light of Day,
Sereen thro' Doubt's cloud-rifts,
Within thy heart His Kingdom lifts
Its never-ending sway.

HERE IS A YOUTHFUL GENIUS.

Alabama Boy Builds a Complete Motor Car—Makes Battleship Model.

Van Whitley, of Alexander City, is one of the most interesting boys in Alabama, according to the Atlanta Constitution. A genius in infancy at 11 months old, he knew every letter in the alphabet before he could speak his name.

At the age of 4 years he developed the love and marvelous ability for art and designing, when he startled his parents by presenting to them on paper, in wonderful accuracy, the railroad engine and trains of cars in different views, which passed by the door of his home. At this age he could draw naturally any phase of almost anything presented to him, from his cubes to a steam engine.

At 9 years of age, without a single lesson in drawing or in art from any teacher, he made crayon portraits of his family and friends and painted landscapes. These paintings to-day hang on the wall of his home as their own proof.

When about 10 years old, after reading of the war with Spain and of our navy, and seeing the pictures of the battle ships, he determined to design and erect his first battle ship, which he later called the Alabama. It was a perfect design of the battle ship Maine, with conning tower and turrets, guns both large and small fore and aft, with the sides of the ship bristling with cannon stationed for broadsiders.

But the automobile which he has designed and erected at odd moments within the past two years is prided by him and his friends most of all. Every piece of this machine was made by his hands in his little shop, from the smallest screw to the largest steering gear. It is four-horse-power and is geared to run twenty miles an hour, and is built and especially adapted to the rough roads common to this hilly country. He says this is the only feasible model for rough country use, and claims his machine can easily clip off fourteen miles an hour, all sorts of roads taken into the trip, and that it will revolutionize and make them practical for rough country use.

MORGAN COVETS THIS RELIC.

English Parish Troubled by Proposed Sale of a Precious Chalice.

J. Pierpont Morgan has set the people of the little parish of Churchill, near Worcester, England, by the ears, through coveting their 300-year-old chalice, for which he has made a handsome offer, says the New York World. The vicar and churchworkers want to refloor their church, and if they can get the money Mr. Morgan offers for the chalice, the work can be done without any call on the parishioners. The proposal has been submitted for the sanction of the chancellor of the diocese, whose decision is awaited.

The chalice is not of distinguished design. On the contrary it is precisely the same date and pattern as the chalices of several neighboring churches and many others about the country. It is five and one-fourth inches high, and is made of hammered silver. It has a conventional floral design round the bowl, but its cover, which was originally made so as to be used as a patent has disappeared. Its hall-mark of 1571 coincides with the year in which Pius V. issued his final bull excommunicating Queen Elizabeth, and it may be, as there are many chalices elsewhere of uniform design, that Queen Elizabeth, to show her disdain of that Bull ordered generally that these sacred vessels should be of this prescribed pattern. However, this point never has been settled, and locally there are some who think that it was Bishop Sandys, of Worcester, and afterward of London, an arbitrary Calvinist, who loved to reduce these things to dull uniformity, who had older chalices broken and worked up to his simple design.

Induce people to laugh with you instead of at you.

RAILWAY FAUNA

Animals accommodate themselves in many ways to the altered conditions of life when human beings trespass upon their wild haunts. The coming of the railroad into savage countries has been followed, says the author of "Animal Artisans," by the development of a real railway fauna, composed of a wide variety of birds and beasts which find their living along the tracks.

Perhaps no more remarkable instance of this is known than is reported by Dr. Vaughan Cornish, an English scholar, who spent some time in northwestern Canada, studying the forms of snow and snow-waves. Dr. Cornish found that the wolves and coyotes, which formerly followed herds of buffalo or camps of travelers across the prairies, picking off stray animals and getting the refuse from the camps, had become modernized into hangers-on of the railway companies.

Every thorough continental train carried one or more dining cars, in which is produced much waste, which is thrown out at the cleaning-up time after each meal. This the animals learned, and they haunt the line in localities where the garbage is usually thrown out, to get the broken bread, bones and trimmings.

Sometimes Dr. Cornish would see a gray wolf, the very personification of cold and famine, sitting by a sage-brush in the drift of snow powder lifted by the icy morning wind, his sharp nose sharply uplifted, waiting for the sun to warm him and the dining car to bring him a beef bone for breakfast.

On the Siberian railroad jackals and foxes follow the through trains for the same purpose.

In England there are many instances of the same thing. There are sections of the country where every morning the foxes hunt along the railway beneath the telegraph line, seeking the birds that have been killed in the night or early morning. A great number of small birds of many sorts meet their death every day by striking against the wires, and a fox who hunts over three or four miles seldom goes hungry.

On the Isle of Wight, in at least one location where the railway passes along the shore, the company has been forced to hang metal disks along the telegraph wires, to attract the attention of the wild swans, which formerly ran into the wires in large numbers; and even in spite of this device many are killed there.

Between London and the British channel there are certain localities where passengers bound for the continent eat their luncheons and throw away the fragments. One of these is in a thick undergrowth, and the partridges there have acquired a habit of hunting the line. They have become so familiar with trains that they will scarcely step aside to let them pass.

In another locality, where frogs breed on one side of the road and commonly migrate across the tracks to the other in large numbers, crows have established a nestling, and live upon the frogs which they catch between the tracks.

Perhaps the oddest of all such incidents is reported from Mauritius, where railways have been installed to carry sugar-cane from the fields to the mills. Monkeys, learning of the practice, used to set out sentinels to give warning when a train was approaching a certain grade where it was forced to slow up, and the whole tribe would leap upon the cars and throw off cane until the top of the hill was reached. A special guard had to be set to keep these "hold-up" animals from the road.

SCENES SKETCHED BY WHISTLER

Delightful River Trip From London to Chelsea and Greenwich.

There are so many delightful trips to be taken on the Thames, that if time is limited it is better to choose the important ones—say Greenwich and Chelsea at least. To be sure they are both only districts of London, and Greenwich may be reached by train or Chelsea by bus, in half an hour. But to go by boat on a pleasant morning, with good company, is nice, since it will likely dispel from your mind some of the weird impressions made there by Dickens, for who that has read "Our Mutual Friend" does not associate the Thames with Lizzie Haxum.

The Royal Observatory is, of course, the reward for going to Greenwich. Where you may see the clock that sets the pace for the world, although it may prove something of an enigma to the novice. The beautiful Grecian palace with its wonderful terraces along the river further repays one, and is interesting as the birthplace of Henry VIII, Queen Elizabeth and Queen Mary.

Along the river Chelsea way, are the originals of many of Whistler's etchings, including Battersea bridge, which was a particular favorite of his. And the interior of the wheelwright's shop, often reproduced, is but a short distance from his Chelsea studio, where he died. Chelsea is full of ghosts of great people. George Eliot spent the last part of her life in a house situated only a short distance from Whistler's. Ellen Terry now occupies a house there, and John Sargent's London studio is in Chelsea.—Los Angeles Times.

DOCTOR RECOMMENDED CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My little girl was born two weeks before her time and my wife died four hours after the birth of our child and I had to raise the baby on artificial foods. Six months after birth she broke out and I had two doctors in attendance. There was not a particle of skin left on her body, the blood oozed out just anywhere, and we had to wrap her in silk and carry her on a pillow for ten weeks. She was the most terrible sight I ever saw, and for six months I looked for her to go to her mama, but thank God and his agents, she is alive and well to-day and she will be three years old the seventh of December and has never had a sign of the dread trouble since."

"I used every known remedy to alleviate her suffering, for it was terrible to witness. Dr. C— gave her up and then I went to C— F— and got Dr. B— and he and Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment saved her. He recommended the Cuticura Remedies, or said we were right in making use of them. As nearly as I can remember, we used eight cakes of Cuticura Soap and three boxes of Cuticura Ointment; but you must take into consideration that hers was an exceptional case, for an old and good doctor said that it was the worst case that had come to him in forty years. I have always hinged on Cuticura Soap to keep her skin soft and to give her a pure complexion. James J. Smith, Wood and Metal Pattern Maker, Box 234, Buena Vista, Va., Oct. 14 and 22, 1906."

Edward Roserath Shot Dead by Wm. R. Gibbons.

Terre Haute, Ind., June 16.—William R. Gibbons shot and killed Edward Roserath, whom he found in company with Mrs. Gibbons, who separated from her husband in March and brought suit for divorce. Gibbons asserts that Roserath was reaching for a brick when he began shooting, and this story is confirmed by eye-witnesses. When Gibbons approached the couple he remarked to Roserath: "She is my wife," and Roserath retorted by saying he did not support her. Chas. Cantwell and Ethel Lytle were with Mrs. Gibbons and Roserath when the trouble began, but they hurried from the scene. Gibbons was employed at the Standard steel works and Roserath was a painter, making his home with a married sister. Neither was twenty-five years old.

All the Gold IN GEORGIA Could not Buy—

Roding, Ga. August 27, 1906. Messrs. R. C. DeWitt & Co., Chicago, Ills.

Gentlemen:— In 1897 I had a disease of the stomach and bowels. Some physicians told me it was Dyspepsia, some Consumption of the Lungs, others said consumption of the Bowels. One physician said I would not live until Spring, and for four long years I existed on a little boiled milk, soda biscuits, doctors' prescriptions and Dyspepsia remedies that flooded the market. I could not digest anything I ate, and in the Spring 1902 I picked up one of your Almanacs as a poor emaciated Dyspepsia wreck I grasped at anything, and that Almanac happened to be my life savor. I thought a fifty cent bottle of KODOL DYSPEPSIA CURE and the benefit I received from that bottle ALL THE GOLD IN GEORGIA COULD NOT BUY. I kept on taking it and in two months I went back to my work, as a machinist, and in three months I was well and hearty. I still use a little occasionally as I find it a fine blood purifier and a good tonic.

INDIANA AROUSED

Hoosier State Delegates Promise to Be In the Limelight at Chicago.

SECOND PLACE QUESTION

Shall the Delegation Go Counter to the Wishes of Mr. Fairbanks or Not Is What's Worrying.

Some Hold That He Should Be Urged For Second Place, But His Managers Say No.

Chicago, June 16.—The vice presidential tangle has developed factional feeling in Indiana and Iowa. The situation in the two states is not identical, but in both Indiana and Iowa there are prominent Republicans on both sides of the question as to whether the state should bid for the honor of naming the running mate for the presidential nominee.

The latest phase of the Iowa situation is that there is some danger that some of Governor Cummins's following may show only a lukewarm interest in the state campaign for the election of B. F. Carroll as governor and other Republican candidates for state offices if opponents of Cummins continue to bar the way to Senator Dolliver's nomination for vice president. The ticket headed by Carroll was named at state primaries at which Senator Allison defeated Governor Cummins for a seat in the senate and the state ticket is not regarded as friendly to Cummins. While Governor Cummins and his friends would be expected to support the choice of the Republicans of the state as expressed at the primaries, it is believed there might be serious defection in the Republican ranks if such a direct slap at Cummins as that proposed by the Iowa delegation is given.

A representative of Mr. Carroll telephoned to George D. Perkins, who heads the Iowa delegation at large, and urged him to abandon opposition to Senator Dolliver's nomination and recommending that Iowa place the senator in nomination if there appeared to be a general demand that his name go on the national ticket. This man, whose name is withheld, is said to have declared that it is believed in Iowa that Dolliver is being opposed for the vice presidency solely because it meant Cummins's election to the senate. The Iowa delegation is not a unit on the question of opposing Dolliver.

Situation in Indiana.

A majority of the members of the Indiana delegation now desire to put forth their best efforts to promote the renomination of Vice President Fairbanks, but Senator Hemenway, Governor Hanly and James P. Goodrich, the chairman of the state central committee, all delegates at large, and Jos. B. Kealing, political manager for the vice president, are holding out strongly against the suggestion that Mr. Fairbanks's name be withdrawn as a candidate for president. Their argument, stated briefly, is that Indiana instructed its delegates to work for the nomination of Mr. Fairbanks for the presidency and not for any other office. They have refused to be moved by the argument from some other members of the delegation that now Mr. Fairbanks may not secure first place, and that his continuance as a candidate for president is destroying whatever opportunity the state has to furnish the vice president.

Among the Indiana delegates who want Mr. Fairbanks eliminated for first place and named for the second position are John C. Zulauf of Jeffersonville, J. Monahan of Orleans, Wm. A. Guthrie of Dupont, J. M. Bauer of Lawrenceburg, Mayor Charles A. Bookwalter of Indianapolis, and J. A. Kautz of Kokomo.

Practically the whole Republican state ticket has arrived in Chicago, prepared to insist that an Indiana man go on the national ticket, whether it be first or second place, if political strategy can bring about such a result. The Republican ticket is headed by Representative James E. Watson, who is the nominee for governor. On the subject of whether Mr. Fairbanks should again go on the ticket in second place in view of the fact that he has been, and still is, a candidate for the presidential nomination, Mr. Watson said:

"Speaking selfishly, I should like to see Mr. Fairbanks nominated for vice president if he cannot get first place. It would help the Republican state ticket. In the interest of Mr. Fairbanks himself, however, I must say that I do not think it would be wisdom for him to again take the vice presidential nomination."

The indications are that other members of the Republican state ticket do not share Mr. Watson's view as to the political wisdom of Mr. Fairbanks consenting to the use of his name for the second place on the national ticket, or that they think the interest of the state ticket is of more importance.

Immediately upon arrival in Chicago the nominees of the Indiana convention began to stir up sentiment in favor of another term for Mr. Fairbanks as presiding officer of the senate. Those who have determined to upset the objections of the Fairbanks managers to the mention of the vice president for renomination include Fremont C. Goodwine, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor, and Secretary of State Fred Sims; Attorney General James Bingham, State Auditor Billheimer and Supreme Court Judge Meyers. These men reached Chicago determined to use every influence to bring about the nomination of Mr. Fairbanks for vice president.

Arguments advanced by candidates for state office have simply divided the Indiana delegation. The charge is made, freely that Mr. Fairbanks and his political managers have no right to refuse to adopt any course which might strengthen the Republican party in the state. On the other hand, there are some members of the Indiana delegation who believe that Fairbanks will stand just as good a show for second place by remaining in the race for first place until the convention has nominated a candidate for president.

In any event there will be disappointment in Iowa or in Indiana and perhaps in both states, and Republican leaders in other states are deprecating the situation responsible for the factional feeling which has been aroused.

Dust Means Sickness

The most striking revelation made by the study of germs is the fact that circulating dust is invariably laden with the germs of disease. It is as important to avoid dust as it is to destroy germs. The only safe way to purchase coffee is to buy Climax in sealed dust-proof packages.

Would That Make Good Coffee?

There is about a day's accumulation of dust upon your parlor table. How much more dust does bulk coffee come in contact with before you buy it?

Roasted coffee is stripped of the outer hull and inner skin, and the pores of the berry, thus left open, absorb all the dust and odors going. Dust and germs are not conducive to good health. Why not buy in the cleanly way, in sealed packages?

Chicago, June 16.—The promoters of the Roosevelt boom movement now claim that they have secured the services of a delegate, "from a state other than Alabama, that will be reached early in the roll call," to present the president's name to the convention. Former Representative Thomas W. Phillips of Newcastle, Pa., declared that Mr. Roosevelt's name unquestionably will be sprung in convention, but he declined to give the delegate's name or the state he represents in part. These facts, he says, will remain secrets until candidates are placed in nomination.

The Roosevelt boomers are counting on a stampede of Taft delegates to the president if they can get the latter's name before the convention in a forceful manner. The opinion was expressed by Mr. Phillips that the boom which he is engineering for Roosevelt is growing.

Bad Sprained Ankle Cured.

Three years ago our daughter sprained her ankle and had been suffering terribly for two days and nights and had not slept a minute. Mr. Stallings, of Butler, Tenn., told us of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. We went to the store that night and got a bottle of it and bathed her ankle two or three times and she went to sleep and had a good night's rest. The next morning she was much better and in a short time could walk around and had no more trouble with her ankle—E. M. Brumitt, Hampton, Tenn. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by C. W. Milhous.

No Need of Suffering from Rheumatism.

It is a mistake to allow rheumatism to become chronic, as the pain can always be relieved, and most cases a cure effected by applying Chamberlain's Pain Balm. The relief from pain which it affords is alone worth many times its cost. It makes sleep and rest possible. Even cases of long standing this liniment should be used on account of the relief it affords. 25 and 50 cent sizes for sale by C. W. Milhous.

Cadillac, Mich., June 16.—The coroner's jury which investigated the deaths of Daniel Cooper, his wife and five children, who were found dead in their home at this place last Saturday, has failed to fix the responsibility for the murder. It was stated on Saturday that Mrs. Cooper committed the deed and then took her own life. The
